Extreme physical feat, and a first for Saskatchewan

Trailblazer. U of R researcher becomes the first runner from the province to compete in and finish the 135-mile Badwater Ultramarathon

It's an extremely gruelling physical test, running 135 miles while climbing steeply in elevation at exceedingly high temperatures. But a Saskatchewan woman was way, way up for the challenge.

Stacey Shand has achieved what many athletes and runners might not be able to even imagine — completing the Badwater Ultramarathon in California after becoming the first person from the province to ever compete in it.

"I had never been through anything like it. It took everything mentally, physically and emotionally," Shand, 33, told Metro of the feat — finishing the race last week through Death Valley and up to Mount Whitney in the unbearable heat of about 54 C.

"It was so tough, but it was one of the most rewarding experiences of my life."

It was quite an accomplishment, in fact, for the University of Regina researcher and sessional lecturer to even begin the race. The Badwater event is extremely selective in choosing its participants, with applicants having to prove their capabilities through previous ultramarathons — those exceeding the standard 26-mile marathon length — and even submitting essays.

But only after being invited in February did the real hard work begin.

"I was training about 25 to 29 hours a week, just to try to build up my endurance for running — but doing a lot of heat training, as well," Shand explained.

"I did a lot of training in the sauna at the gym, and a lot of my runs were in lots and lots of layers so I could get used to being very hot."

With a support crew driving alongside, Shand — who has been running marathons and ultramarathons around the world for about eight years — completed the trek in 41 hours and 47 minutes, finishing ninth out of about 30 women to finish the race.

Overall, she finished in the middle of the pack of about 90 in what National Geographic describes as the toughest foot race in the world.

"I never slept at all. I kept going the whole time," she said of the longest race she has ever run.

"My goal is to see what I'm capable of and to become a healthier, happier person — and to just have some really cool life experiences."

SGI targets unbuckled drivers in traffic blitz

Heads Up, Buckle Up.
Summer more dangerous with higher levels of traffic

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

Just a day after two people were killed in a collision on Highway 16, east of Theodore, SGI kicked off its July traffic blitz.

Running July 24 and July 25, Operation Heads Up, Buckle Up, will involve law enforcement across Saskatchewan targeting drivers who fail to yield to pedestrians, people not wearing their seat belts, and jaywalkers.

"It's really more about awareness rather than ticketing people," said Kim Hambleton, manager of communications with SGI.

"(The blitzes) are always focused around key traffic issues that we want to raise awareness about and remind people that they cause injuries and fatalities," she said. "If people don't get that message, then enforcement is there to remind them in the form of a ticket."

According to SGI, in more than one-third of traffic fatalities in Saskatchewan, the person killed was not wearing a seat belt. In 2012, improper or non-seatbelt use contributed to 47 deaths and 274 injuries.

"Seatbelts do save lives and in the summer months, when we typically see an increase in the volume of traffic on our highways, it's more important than ever to buckle up," said Troy Hagen, president of the Saskatchewan Association of Chiefs of Police, in a release.

A total of 412 tickets were issued during June's traffic blitz, which targeted those not wearing a seatbelt and those using a phone while driving.

"The ideal goal would be zero tickets, because that would mean no one is exhibiting any unsafe behaviors," she said.

Stroke! Stroke! For Heart and Stroke!

Saskatoon residents will have a chance to see some high-speed action on the South Saskatchewan River over the weekend, as the Facility Marketing Group Saskatoon Dragon Boat Festival celebrates its 18th year in the city.

The event will see a total of 40 teams, consisting of 22 racers, taking to the water in support of the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

"There's always been good support in Saskatoon," said Scott Walker, owner of the FMG Saskatoon Dragon Boat Festival.

"I think one thing the dragon boating does more so than any other group activity, like softball or soccer or slow-pitch, is that it introduces people to the waterway.

"It's amazing how many people have never seen the city of Saskatoon from the water," he said.

Walker explained interest in the event continues to grow, as this year organizers had to turn away teams who were looking to compete.

"We like the number of 40: I it's a good number to work with on the water and it's a safe number to work with," said Walker. "There is a possibility that we might be able to increase a little bit, but that's a discussion for down the road."

Held at Rotary Park, the Dragon Boat Festival starts on Friday evening with a 250-metre sprint at 6 p.m., while the majority of races take place on Saturday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. with heats starting every 13 minutes. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

Rider Nation weighs in on Durant's durability

With Darian Durant's strong start to the 2013 CFL season, Metro hit the streets to find out if fans think he has what it takes — and what he will have to do to hold the Roughriders starting quarterback position.

Cassandra Hope, 24, accountant, Regina

"No way. Durant panics under the pressure.... He just needs to stay calm and focused."

Ron Spizziri, 65, retired, Saskatoon

"I think he has to continue to do what he's doing, that's for sure, but I think he's got to back off sometimes with these injuries he's been having and so on. Maybe he should get out of the game a little earlier … and just protect himself a little more."

Brittany Knouse, 25, accountant, Regina

"No, just based on his history with the Riders, he usually bites the dust a little bit.… Just stay healthy and don't get injured."

Mike Bushey, 27, teacher, Peterborough, Ont.

"No way, not at all, not with this upcoming season. And they just got that new quarterback. He looks sick! He's younger, I know the other guy has more experience, but at the same time it's always nice to see a fresh new face in the biz."

David Lal, 25, restaurant worker, Regina

"Absolutely. I think Darian is an awesome player and a very good quarterback.… He needs to put on his best performance as a quarterback (and) bring his career up a level."

James Venne, 47, transit operator, Saskatoon

"Well, I think he does, but you've also got to remember it takes the team to make the quarterback, and once you have that gelling you should have a very awesome team."

Man with no arms still wants apology for seatbelt ticket

A man with no arms isn't giving up his fight against a Saskatoon officer who gave him a ticket for not wearing a seatbelt.

Steve Simonar, 55, made headlines across the country this year when he complained about getting his first seatbelt ticket. He can't physically buckle up.

A Crown attorney recently withdrew the $175 fine in court after the province granted Simonar a medical exemption allowing him to drive without wearing a belt.

Simonar is pleased, but not backing down. He still wants an apology from the constable who gave him the ticket and he wants the force to reprimand the officer.

"The ticket never was the issue," Simonar said on Wednesday. "It's good that they had enough sense to throw it out, but the bigger picture is still this officer's attitude."

Simonar, owner of a Saskatoon construction company, lost his arms after he was electrocuted in a boating accident. He learned to drive with his feet and has had several vehicles modified so he can do so.

He said police have pulled him over at least 20 times in the past and never gave him a seatbelt ticket.

So he was surprised when he got his first ticket during a traffic blitz in April. Simonar said the officer told him if he couldn't wear a seatbelt, he shouldn't be driving.

A police spokeswoman later explained that Simonar didn't have a medical exemption, so he needed to be given a ticket.

Simonar said he used to carry a doctor's note and didn't know the rules had changed requiring him to apply to Saskatchewan Government Insurance for a written exemption. He applied for one soon after he got the ticket.

He later sat down with the officer who gave him the ticket and a superior. But Simonar said they wouldn't rip up the ticket and the officer was offensive. Simonar alleges the officer said "you people" in referring to handicapped drivers.

Police are no longer commenting on the ticket or the officer's actions because Simonar has filed a formal complaint with the Saskatchewan Public Complaints Commission.

By George, we're famous!
Royal baby shines light on Prince George, B.C.

What does Prince George think of Prince George?

"Well there's always excitement around a new baby, especially one that shares your name," said Shari Green, mayor of Prince George, B.C.

On Wednesday, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge announced their newborn son would be named George Alexander Louis — or just Prince George to his friends.

Green said the royal bump couldn't come at a better time.

"We're celebrating 100 years in city, 25 years of the university ... and hosting the Canada Winter Games," she said.

The mayor will be extending a formal invitation to the Cambridge trio for the festivities. City staff are also preparing a care package for the royal tot — including a "little onesie with Prince George on it," she said.

Green was thrilled to win out over a local rival.

"The mayor of Prince Rupert I'm sure is a little bit disappointed today," she joked.

Chris Brown not cowed by protests

Controversial musician Chris Brown is adding another Canadian show to his summer tour, despite protests from groups in cities hosting his concerts.

Drop Entertainment Group announced today that Brown will headline the Hot Summer Blast Festival in Saint John, N.B., on Sept. 1.

Brown is also performing in Toronto, Winnipeg and Halifax, which have seen opposition against the musician for pleading guilty to assaulting R&B singer and then-girlfriend Rihanna in 2009.

The mayor of Halifax has voiced his objections to Brown performing in the city, while companies pulled their sponsorship of the concert after learning he was the headliner.

Meanwhile, the singer is facing a trial next month in a hit-and-run case after his lawyer entered a not-guilty plea for him Tuesday.

Burka ninja says to stay in school

Pakistan. Cartoon sees superheroine fight to keep girls' school open

Wonder Woman and Supergirl now have a Pakistani counterpart — one that shows a lot less skin.

Meet the Burka Avenger: a mild-mannered teacher with secret martial-arts skills who uses a black burka to hide her identity as she fights local thugs seeking to shut down her girls' school.

Sadly, it's a scenario Pakistanis are all too familiar with. The Taliban have blown up hundreds of schools and attacked activists who support girls' education.

Action in the Burka Avenger cartoon series is much more lighthearted. The bungling bad guys evoke more laughter than fear and are no match for the Burka Avenger, undoubtedly the first South Asian ninja who wields books and pens as weapons.

The Urdu language show is the brainchild of one of Pakistan's biggest pop stars, Aaron Haroon Rashid, who conceived of it as a way to emphasize the importance of girls' education and teach children other lessons, such as not discriminating against others.

The main bad guys are Vadero Pajero, a corrupt politician, and Baba Bandook, an evil magician meant to resemble a Taliban commander.

In one episode, Bandook builds a robot to take over the world's major cities. As he outlines his plan, one of his minions asks, "But how will we get visas to go to all those places?" — a reference to how hard it can be for Pakistanis to travel, given their country's reputation.

Dress to repress?

Burka brings controversy, but imagine spandex

The decision to clothe the superhero in a black burka — also often spelled burqa, a full-length robe commonly worn by conservative Islamic women in Pakistan and Afghanistan — could raise eyebrows because some people view the outfit as a sign of oppression.

The Taliban forced women to wear burkas when they took control of Afghanistan in the 1990s.

The version worn by the Burka Avenger shows only her eyes and fingers — though it has a sleeker, more ninja-like look than the bulky robes of an actual burka.

Rashid, who is certainly no radical Islamist, said he used a burka to give a local feel to the show, which is billed as the first animated series ever produced in Pakistan.

"It's not a sign of oppression. She is using the burka to hide her identity like other superheroes," said Rashid.

"Since she is a woman, we could have dressed her up like Catwoman or Wonder Woman, but that probably wouldn't have worked in Pakistan."

Aboriginal finding sparks national rallies

Rallies are planned across Canada Thursday to draw attention to experiments conducted on aboriginals, and to demand the federal government release all documents that could reveal other such abuses.

People concerned about the tests, which were reported by The Canadian Press last week, are expected to gather in seven cities to pray, talk and pressure Ottawa to provide all its information on residential schools to the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

"People from different backgrounds, they've been telling me they're disgusted," said Wab Kinew, one of the organizers.

Many Canadians were appalled last week upon learning that the federal government had commissioned research on aboriginals in remote communities in northern Manitoba and at six residential schools across the country during the 1940s.

The researchers knew the people they were studying were hungry, but instead of advocating they be better fed, they chose to use them as unwitting subjects to test the effects of different vitamins and minerals. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Among other things, the souped-up line of Nexus tablets will boast a higher-definition seven-inch display screen and a processor that promises to be nearly twice as fast. Dual stereo speakers have been added for richer sound, and battery duration has been extended to 10 hours for web browsing. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Provincial and territorial leaders threw their support Wednesday behind a national public inquiry into missing and murdered aboriginal women and girls, ramping up the pressure on Prime Minister Stephen Harper to follow suit.

There was support for an inquiry among the premiers who met with aboriginal leaders Wednesday before the Council of the Federation meeting, said Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne, who will chair the premiers' summit on Thursday.

She said violence against aboriginal women is an important issue that has touched every Canadian jurisdiction and is extremely important to all the leaders who attended the meeting.

Alberta Premier Alison Redford and Newfoundland Premier Kathy Dunderdale were absent from the meeting, but both later went on record as supporting its outcome.

They did so after Michele Audette, president of the Native Women's Association of Canada, had said she interpreted their absence as a message of non-support for the inquiry.

But Redford, who had been in Toronto on matters related to Alberta's flood aftermath, issued a statement saying she in fact supports the decision taken at the meeting.

"I'm very pleased that premiers were able to take this important step forward together today," the statement said.

And a spokeswoman for Dunderdale said in a statement that the Newfoundland and Labrador premier supported the outcome of the day's meeting and had been unable to attend because of a family emergency. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Train derailment kills, injures dozens in Spain

A passenger train derailed Wednesday night on a curvy stretch of track in northwestern Spain, killing at least 40 people caught inside toppled cars and injuring more than 140 in the country's worst rail accident in decades, officials said.

Bodies were covered in blankets next to the tracks and rescue workers tried to get trapped people out of the train's cars, with smoke billowing from some of the wreckage. Some passengers were pulled out of broken windows, and one man stood atop a carriage lying on its side, using a pickaxe to try to smash through a window. Images showed one car pointing up into the air with one of its ends twisted and disfigured, and another severed in two.

Officials gave differing death tolls in the aftermath of the crash just outside Santiago de Compostela, on the eve of the city's annual religious festival that attracts tens of thousands of Christian pilgrims.

Alberto Nunez Feijoo, president of the region of Galicia, where Santiago de Compostela is the capital, said at least 40 people died. But the president of Galicia's main court, Miguel Angel Cadenas, was quoted as saying 56 died.

State-owned train operator Renfe said in a statement that 218 passengers and an unspecified number of staff were on board. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Music to foodies' ears. Live Nation will stick to locally sourced food at U.S. venues

Concert promoter Live Nation is overhauling its U.S. concessions to serve only local produce and humanely-raised meats.

Starting this week, all produce served at Live Nation's 38 amphitheatres around the U.S. will be sourced from within roughly a 100-mile radius (about 160 kilometres) of each venue. Additionally, all meats will carry either Certified Humane, Global Animal Partnership or Animal Welfare Approved certification.

The change will cost the company about an extra $1 million US a year, but concertgoers won't see that reflected in food or ticket prices, says Live Nation CEO Michael Rapino. He believes the goodwill generated by serving better food and supporting local farms will be compensation enough.

The company has brought on celebrity chef Hugh Acheson as a consultant to help guide the changes. Acheson, an outspoken proponent of local and sustainable agriculture, is best known for appearances on Bravo's Top Chef and Top Chef Masters. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mom's more plugged in than you think

Social media. Far from being tech-challenged, demo ranks among 'most social consumers you'll meet,' report says

Despite the fact that moms are heavily engaged online, preconceptions that they're not interested in technology remain, researchers say. ISTOCK

Forget the outdated stereotype of the tech-illiterate soccer mom. Twenty-first-century moms are increasingly becoming one of the most digitally savvy cohorts in Canada, according to a recently released report backed by data from measurement firm comScore and online surveys.

The 2013 Canada Social Mom report, published by the parenting website BabyCenter, calls today's plugged-in moms "the most social consumers you'll meet."

The report suggests 93 per cent of Canadian moms who use the Internet are logging into social networks every month. Tablet ownership among moms was up nearly 100 per cent in the past year. And mothers were found to be two and a half times more likely to prefer checking their social media feeds on a smartphone rather than using a computer.

Researchers have been watching Canadian moms dramatically increase their Internet usage for years now, but preconceptions that they're not interested in technology remain, said Gagan Sharma, research director for Mom Central Consulting, which has offices in Toronto, Boston and New York.

"Despite the fact we see that moms are heavily engaged online, they're tech savvy, they're engaged, we still find there is that perception where people don't understand that moms are actually leading the charge in a lot of ways," Sharma said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Time spent online

- According to the 2013 Canada Social Mom report, younger Canadian moms in particular (defined as ages 18 to 34) were seen to be very digitally engaged, often more so than the general public.
- When it comes to signing into Facebook, those moms averaged 10.7 hours of usage a month, which was 55 per cent more than the 6.9 hours estimated for the rest of the general public, according to comScore.
- The young moms were also major users of Tumblr (32 per cent versus 18 per cent of the general public), Instagram (32 per cent versus 19 per cent) and Pinterest (23 per cent versus 14 per cent).

Pride, prejudice and pounds: Jane Austen to grace British banknote

Jane Austen will become the new face on England's 10-pound notes. The Bank of England chose the chronicler of 18th-century English country life as the new face of the note, bowing to critics who complained that the venerable institution was ignoring women on their currency.

"Jane Austen certainly merits a place in the select group of historical figures to appear on our banknotes," the bank's new governor Mark Carney said Wednesday in a statement. "Her novels have an enduring and universal appeal and she is recognized as one of the greatest writers in English literature."

The controversy began earlier this year when the bank announced it would replace the 19th-century social reformer Elizabeth Fry with wartime Prime Minister Winston Churchill on the five-pound note. Though Churchill is still revered for his Second World War leadership, the change led to protests because no other woman besides Queen Elizabeth II would be shown on Britain's currency. HE SAYS

John Mazerolle

Is dating shrinking?

I feel like dating has gotten smaller, with less weight and consequence. The Book of Love has become a pamphlet.

I've been pondering what I've been pondering with my Brain because recently I discovered a smartphone dating app called Tinder, which condenses relationship hunting to its smallest, shallowest form.

Unlike other dating sites that get bogged down in details like what the person is like or whether they can speak English, Tinder just focuses on what you need to know: name, age, location and looks. If it's good enough for your passport, it's good enough for your soulmate.

And many Tinder users conveniently add photographs that focus on areas below the neck, in case you're not a face person.

There is room to write a bio, but the box is barely big enough for a cigarette warning. If you like the person, you swipe to the right. If you don't, to the left.

Essentially it's Goldilocks and The Three Bears if Goldilocks had grown up to be a player: Not hot enough! Too hot! Just right. Check!

There are all types on Tinder, but a typical woman on the site is a 22-year-old named Lauren (I swear, every fourth one is Lauren) who has a small dog, friends she poses with at clubs, a tendency to get a leg up when she takes selfies, and an inspirational quote that makes sense about 35 per cent of the time. ("Life is just in-between reality and fantasy, so love.")

If two people like each other, the app opens a chat window and you can start planning your wedding. If either person chooses "Nope," then neither side is the wiser.

Tinder removes all the depth from online dating, which is a bit like removing all the nutrients from a Twinkie or cutting the substantive scenes from a Michael Bay movie.

But I still kind of like it. I know the gut reaction is to cry out about how shallow the app is, but whatever — most deep relationships start in the shallow end, and if two people just want to fool around in the pool, laughing at Danger in the face, more power to them. My only issue — and what made me think about dating's shrinking act — is that there is no risk on Tinder. The app lets you approach the most beautiful woman within 100 miles, and she can't laugh in your face. She can screenshot you to Instagram, sure, but it doesn't have quite the same impact.

I remember how BIG dating seemed when I was in my early 20s. Asking someone out was an enormous mountain to climb — a difficult task when your palms are sweaty and you're hyperventilating.

So what's it like for a young person now? How do relationships feel when so many are started online, before you're as jaded as a 30-something? I'm not judging. I'm genuinely curious.

Once I dreamed of putting my hand on the cheek of a beautiful woman, like Romeo and Juliet. Now I swipe my thumb across her face. Dating may be shrinking, but these are big thoughts for Lauren and I to consider. We're going to be very happy together. Not her dog, though. I swiped it left.

The Conservative government's mismanagement of the North has made its cost of living soar and caused shortages of basic services, hurting families and jeopardizing the economic potential of the region. Too many communities still lack access to fast, reliable Internet service, undermining business development and skills training. And a lack of basic health and mental health services is undermining the foundations of communities — the very basis of their prosperity.

With bountiful natural resources and a quickly growing population, the North is building a strong economy. Yet its full potential cannot be realized if families cannot afford healthy food, cannot find a place to live and cannot get the supports they need.

Mr. Harper needs to be more than a tourist when he visits the North for his annual Arctic photo op later this summer.

Book a poetic home run

Bench breakout. Stealing Home pays tribute to a popular past time

BACKSTAGE PASS
Simon Hiatt
saskatoon@metronews.ca

Most athletes spend their time trying to avoid the bench, but it's there Dwayne Brenna may have achieved his greatest success.

Brenna never made it to the majors as a middle infielder, but his collected book of poems, Stealing Home, could take his literary career to the big leagues, and many of the ideas came from the lulls in the action.

"It's such a meditative game and some of the oddest occurrences and funniest things I've heard have occurred on benches at baseball games," Brenna said.

While the book includes tributes to the greats of the game like Babe Ruth and Jackie Robinson, it also captures the on- and off- field triumphs and failures of Brenna's current and former teammates, some of whom showed up at a recent poetry reading in full uniform.

"I started it out by saying to these guys, 'Who knew that everything you said and did was poetry?'"

The idea for the collection came to Brenna while he was living in Edmonton as a self-described "house husband."

He set out to write about his home province of Saskatchewan, but kept on returning to the sport he loves and played for the past 52 years.

"It's always been something that I could take refuge in," Brenna said. "I could always find some joy (on the baseball diamond) if nowhere else."

For Brenna, that place of refuge has often been a concrete shell in the southwest corner of Saskatoon called Cairns Field.

He has played and watched countless games there over the years.

While it may not have the charm of Wrigley Field or Fenway Park, Brenna believes Cairns is just as deserving of a tribute.

In his poem named after the park he describes watching his son play there and declares, "I believe that no place in the world is as joyous as this baseball field tonight."

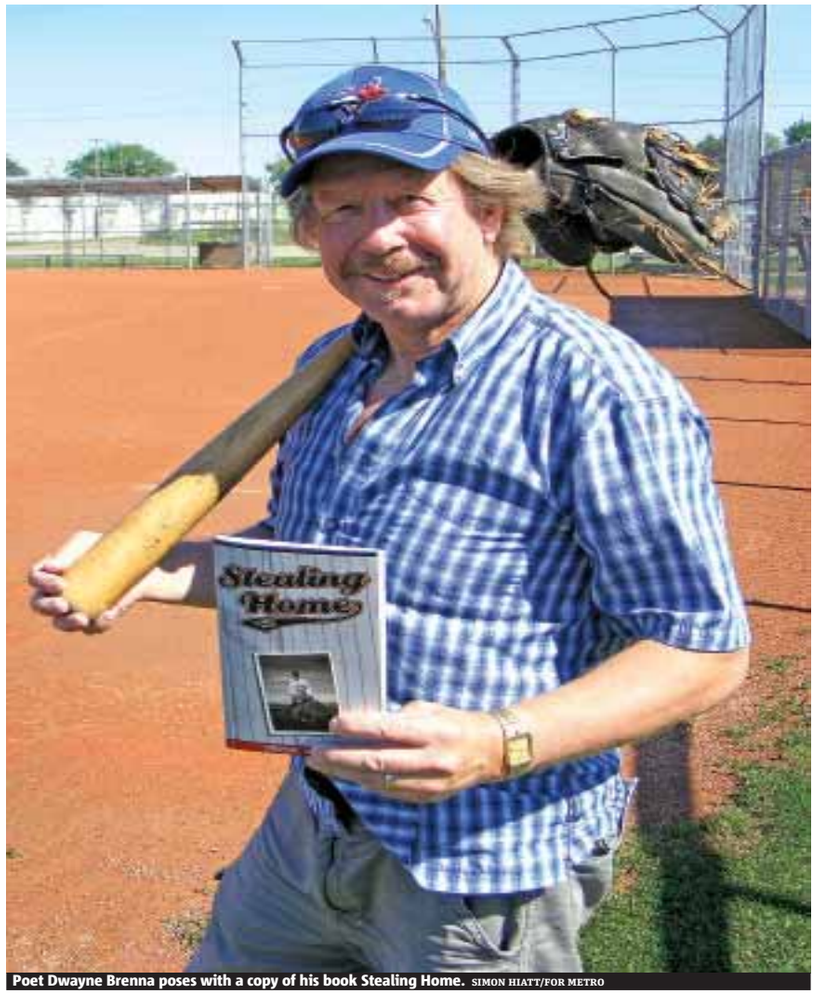
Brenna says the relationships between fathers and sons can be strengthened by baseball.

"My earliest memory is of my dad hitting pop flies to my brother and I in the pasture behind our yard."

Brenna and his son have been spending a lot of time together recently because of the sport, although it hasn't been on the diamond.

The younger Brenna has been accompanying his father at readings of Stealing Home and playing baseball songs on the piano.

"It really is in many ways a father/son game. Believe me, just listening to me read them is not nearly as exciting as it is with him playing music in the background, that brings back all the nostalgia."



Poet Dwayne Brenna poses with a copy of his book Stealing Home. SIMON HIATT/FOR METRO

Honest Leto lets us in on his troubled, drug-fuelled past

It turns out Jared Leto's own teenage years were a lot more dramatic than what he played on My So-Called Life. In a Letter to my Younger Self for the U.K.'s Big Issue, Leto admits to a pretty rocky adolescence. "If I met the teenage Jared now the first thing I'd notice would probably be that my wallet was missing," he writes. "I was in trouble quite a bit with the authorities, any person who made rules or the law. Probably a lot of my behaviour was related to doing drugs." Leto even cops to considering some different career paths. "I was at a crossroads in life when I was 16," he admits. "I didn't know I was going to be an actor. I thought it might be an artist or a painter. Or maybe a drug dealer. But I didn't know which path I would take. It's just fortunate that I chose one over the other."

Lovato 'protective' over party-hard Miley Cyrus

It's no secret Miley Cyrus loves a good party, with tales of marijuana, ecstasy and salvia use popping up regularly. Now pal Demi Lovato is looking to give her some sobering advice. "She knows how I feel about the whole partying thing," she tells MTV News. "I'm always like, 'Just be careful.' And she's like, 'Dude, I'm chilling. It's fine.'" For now at least, Lovato is taking Cyrus at her word. "I care for her so much, I'm so protective, but she's good," Lovato says. "She's got a good head on her shoulders."

Kudrow urges all to forget about Friends the movie

Lisa Kudrow wants to be clear: There won't be a Friends movie, so please stop asking about it. "I knew there wasn't ever a movie. There was never a Friends movie. Ever. So I've always known it's not happening," she tells CNN. "With this last rumour someone came up with a great graphic with the couch and it looked like a real teaser. And then someone came up with a fake story and got some publication to buy the lie that there was going to be a reunion. And I went, 'Wait a minute, was I not invited? Oh my God, maybe there is one and I wasn't asked to do it.' I even had a moment where I believed it because everything around it looked real. It was a good setup."

Bynes being held after fire incident in California

Amanda Bynes' return to California went south pretty fast, with the troubled actress detained by police and put on a 72-hour psychiatric hold after reportedly trespassing and setting a small fire on a neighbour's property, according to police reports obtained by TMZ. "I see this girl with her pant leg on fire and a gas can trailing fire through the driveway," local resident Andrew Liverpool tells E! News. "She put the fire out on her leg and was rushing over to her dog. I kicked the gas can over and moved it to the middle of the driveway so nothing else would catch on fire. I said, 'Are you OK?' She was kind of frantic and discombobulated." Bynes allegedly attempted to flee the scene in a taxi, with police cars chasing after. The troubled actress returned to California because she "was unable to find any place to live in New York City because of her bizarre behaviour," a source tells Radar Online. "No one would rent an apartment to her. She does own a house in Calabasas. It's unclear how she got to California from New York."

This trend's got staying power

If you follow beauty blogs and magazines, you may have noticed that primers are the new "must" makeup artists swear by. We test out five to see which can stand the heat and humidity

ROMINA McGUINNESS
Metro World News

By Terry Hyaluronic Hydra-Primer

The press release says the formula will reduce enlarged pores. But after putting it on, mine still looked like gaping holes. The formula felt heavier than I expected, but it gets high marks for staying power. Twelve hours and a sweaty yoga class later, I still had a full face of makeup on.
$59, spacenk.com

MAC Prep + Prime Skin Primer

Everything about this is shimmery — the packaging, tube and cream all contain glitter. So I expected this to give my skin a glow as well. No dice. But I liked that this primer made my skin feel smooth and oil free. However, it took me twice as long to wash my makeup off.
$29, maccosmetics.com

Estée Lauder Illuminating Perfecting Primer

Is that a glow I see? This primer brightened up my face and anchored down my BB cream, stopping it from sliding off my face. The texture is thick, but not pore-cloggingly so, and the formula, which includes shea butter, made my skin feel softer than usual. But I could do without the mattifying effect, which was too powdery for my taste.
$32, esteelauder.com

Stila One Step Correct

This formula made my makeup look natural and healthy, leaving a dewy, smooth finish. And the colour correcting mousse managed to hide the stubborn red patches around my nose. Best of all, it lasted all day and I forgot I had anything on.
$36, stilacosmetics.com

Benefit 'That Gal' Brightening Face Primer

I tried this on a bad skin day. I was looking a bit sallow. But after trying it on, my cheeks looked rosy. It also gave my skin a smooth surface, hiding my scars and minimizing the size of my pores. Come bedtime — even after I had washed my face — my skin hadn't lost its glow. $29, benefitcosmetics.com

All the comforts of a 5-star hotel

Prepared. Staying in a one-star? We've got you covered

DESIGN CENTRE
Karl Lohnes
home@metronews.ca

Hunting for inexpensive travel accommodations is getting easier with the trendy pod-style, micro-tiny hotels popping up in popular destination cities, as well as options of living in someone's home from sites like AirBNB.com.

But not all places have the comforts of a 5-star hotel; truth be told, most would get between one to three stars. But shared bathrooms, living in a stranger's home and summer dorm rentals are a common and inexpensive way to see the world. Here's a few travel companions to pack if adventuring out to stay at alternative accommodations.

They're guaranteed to help turn a two-star room into a five-star hotel experience.

Doing the chicken dance with some mushrooms and a lettuce bowl

"(Lettuce Bowls with Shiitake Mushrooms and Hoisin Chicken are) a fast day version of a Chinese standard, and perhaps one for a day when you're feeling frilly and creative," writes Mimi Spencer in The FastDiet Cookbook. "You could add ... chopped water chestnuts for extra crunch — they're barely a blip on the calorie radar."

1. Heat a wok and spray with oil. Add the ginger and garlic and stir-fry for 30 seconds.

2. Add the cabbage, carrot, mushrooms, and bean sprouts. Stir-fry for 2 minutes, till the vegetables are just cooked but retain their bite. Season with pepper and add hoisin sauce.

3. Add the shredded chicken and toss to mix.

4. Place 2 or 3 iceberg lettuce leaves in a wide-rimmed cup, making a bowl effect. Spoon the chicken mixture into the bowl and serve with a scatter of toasted sesame seeds. ALL RECIPE TEXT COPYRIGHT © 2013 BY MIMI SPENCER LTD FROM THE FASTDIET COOKBOOK PUBLISHED BY ATRIA BOOKS, A DIVISION OF SIMON & SCHUSTER, INC.

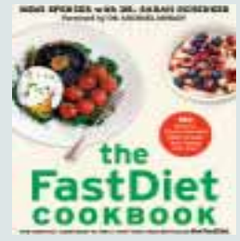
Cookbook of the Week

A new approach to weight loss



Dr. Michael Mosley's message is that it's possible to lose weight and reduce your risk of diabetes, cardiovascular disease and cancer, all while eating what you would normally eat five days a week. You simply cut your caloric intake two days a week — to 500 calories for women, 600 for men.

The new book, The FastDiet Cookbook, which was written by Mimi Spencer with Dr. Sarah Schenker, boasts 150 carefully crafted, nutritious, low-calorie recipes that range from simple breakfast to suppers. METRO

A lingering foot injury forced Darian Durant to miss practice Wednesday. LIAM RICHARDS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Durant can't kick lingering injury

You put your right foot in ... a walking boot. QB skips practice but hopeful he'll play vs. Ticats Saturday

Darian Durant is back wearing a walking boot.

The Saskatchewan Roughriders quarterback didn't practise Wednesday, telling reporters afterwards his right foot injury flared up following the club's 37-0 home win over the Hamilton Tiger-Cats on Sunday.

Durant said he went back to wearing the boot in an attempt to give his foot added support.

"It kind of swelled up on me a little bit over the past couple of days," Durant said. "We're just being smart about it, being cautious.

"We'll see where we're at (Thursday)."

Durant, 30, injured his foot in a 39-28 road win over the Toronto Argonauts on July 11. He wore the boot early last week but managed to shed it and resume practising later in the week before starting against Hamilton.

Durant showed no signs Sunday of the foot bothering him, completing 20 of 32 passes for 347 yards and four TDs. He was named the CFL's offensive player of the week.

Durant said there was no specific play Sunday that aggravated the injury.

"I really didn't take any hits," he said. "I guess it was just coming from the pounding, starting and stopping, dropping (back) and running.

"All the normal things that happen during a game. It didn't really respond well to that. It was pretty sore (after Sunday's game) and it got a little swollen on me. Right now we're just trying to manage the pain, manage the swelling."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quoted

"We're going to take it day by day and see how this thing feels. As of right now I hope to be able to go."

Darian Durant. The Roughriders will take on the Tiger-Cats in Guelph, Ont., on Saturday.

Will injuries, PEDs end A-Rod's career?

Alex Rodriguez certainly leads the New York Yankees in headlines this season even though he hasn't played a single major-league game.

Rodriguez faces discipline from Major League Baseball in its drug investigation, possibly up to a lifetime ban.

"The likelihood of a severe punishment for Rodriguez is very high," former commissioner Fay Vincent said Wednesday.

The three-time AL MVP who turns 38 Saturday is among more than a dozen players MLB has targeted following allegations they were linked to a Florida clinic accused of distributing performance-enhancing drugs.

Tiger-Cats sign ex-Argo Isaac

Brandon Isaac wasn't unemployed long.

The veteran linebacker signed with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats on Wednesday, a day after being released by the Toronto Argonauts.

The signing of Isaac also comes a day after Hamilton released veteran linebacker Markeith Knowlton, the CFL's outstanding defensive player in 2010.

Hamilton also signed defensive back Emanuel Davis while releasing receiver Ouslet Volcy.

Isaac had 16 tackles and one sack this season with Toronto after helping the Argos win the 100th Grey Cup last November.

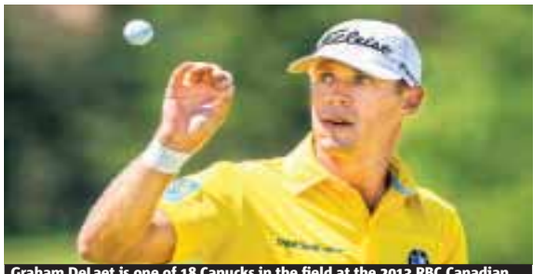
Pressure on Canadians to end long drought



Graham DeLaet is one of 18 Canucks in the field at the 2013 RBC Canadian Open at Glen Abbey Golf Club. DAVID COOPER/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

National opens always put pressure on the homegrown players, but the expectations are particularly high this week at Glen Abbey Golf Club in Oakville, Ont.

There are 18 Canadians in the field for the 2013 RBC Canadian Open — one of the largest home-country turnouts in the modern history of the tournament — and they're all looking to end a 59-year drought. No Canadian has won the event since Pat Fletcher of Vancouver in 1954.

If anyone can understand the high expectations it's former Masters champion Mike Weir.

"There is that added feel and pressure, no question," the Brights Grove, Ont., native said Wednesday. "It can be a good thing though to get the crowd behind you," he added. "Get some momentum going, and you can feed off the crowd."

Weir is joined by fellow Ontarians David Hearn from Brantford, Mackenzie Hughes from Dundas, Toronto's Albin Choi, Ottawa's Brad Fritsch, Peter Laws from Milton, Brian Hadley from Sarnia and amateur Corey Conners of Listowel.

British Columbia is also well represented with Abbotsford's Adam Hadwin, Victoria's Kevin Carrigan, Merritt's Roger Sloan, Comox's Riley Wheeldon, as well as North Vancouver's Bryn Parry and Eugene Wong and amateur Adam Svensson from Surrey in the field.

Calgary's Stephen Ames, Graham DeLaet of Weyburn, Sask., and Eric Banks of Truro, N.S., will also tee off Thursday on the 7,253-yard, par-72 course. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
If you approach a difficult task with confidence today, you will do an excellent job of it and impress a lot of people. But don't go over the top and go around shouting what a winner you are. Be modest.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
There are some annoying people out there and you must promise yourself that, whatever the provocation, you won't lose your cool. If you do, you may lose other things too.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Your ideas may be good but you need to find ways to make them pay. It shouldn't be difficult but bear in mind: some people will be negative, no matter how much you achieve.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Be extra careful with your cash, investments and other commercial interests today. Most importantly, don't let anyone push you into signing something you are not 100 per cent sure about. Just say "no".

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You may think you can force others to go along with your plans, but it's not the best strategy. If they don't want to accompany you on your journey, they would be a liability anyway.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Turn your back on the past and move into the bright future that awaits you. You can't do it all at once, but you must be serious about it. There have been far too many false starts.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Everyone you meet seems determined to point out where you've been going wrong. But you don't have to agree with them. Smile sweetly, nod in agreement then carry on doing what you're doing.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may be bored and looking to inject excitement into your life but don't go too far and annoy people on whom you may depend. That is especially important on the work front.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
The message of the stars today is that you should keep your head and not try to impose your will on others. However big and tough a Sag you may be, there is always someone bigger and tougher out there.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
It's not like you to make a drama out of a crisis but the cosmic picture is making it hard to see anything but problems. Think positive and circumstances will improve.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Someone may be acting selfishly but there is no need to provoke a fight. That could be exactly what they are hoping for as they need to take their aggression out on someone.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
The answers you get depend on the questions you ask and if you ask intelligent questions about your life and the direction it is moving, you will get all the answers you need today. SALLY BROMPTON
